The Venue's 'Mom' to retire

BOISE — Bob and Sharon Keck opened The Venue in 2003, along with their kids Dan, Andrew and Dave. They started the iconic Boise destination as a youth outreach program to give teens a safe place to meet and develop their musical talents. After eight eventful years, the Kecks decided it was time to hand over the reins of The Venue.

Johann and Jenean Claus, Boise natives and avid music lovers, took over the landmark institution on June 1 and will continue the management and operations. Future shows will be booked through the current talent buyer, and longtime fans of The Venue will not notice a major change in touring acts. Tickets for shows at The Venue will still be available through Ticketfly, The Record

Exchange and at The Venue box office once doors open the day of the show.

From the beginning, The Venue has been like a family, and most of the current team has been instrumental in its success since day one, and will stay on. The youth-oriented atmosphere will remain consistent ... in keeping with Mom's vision to make The Venue "a safe place for kids to go."
