

dwell

Whitetail Club's Modern Mountain Sanctuary Integrates Idaho Wilderness for Ultimate Indoor-Outdoor Living Experience

February 28, 2023

As privacy and seclusion become the ultimate luxury, more have sought after purchasing untouched lands in the United States' remote wilderness to build their dream homes – but most don't know where to find it. In McCall, Idaho, buyers are not only discovering a secluded mountain location, but are also finding it easy to craft their indoor-outdoor dream homes from scratch at Whitetail Club.

With customized home designs by a variety of architects, one home is taking indoor-outdoor living to a new level by integrating the awe-inspiring outdoors of the vast Idaho wilderness within and throughout the home. This stunning single-family home by Stephen Green was designed to fit on any lot within the renowned private community Whitetail Club.

The multi-level mountain luxury escape, known as Highlands, shines with a design that incorporates generous outdoor space and floor-to-ceiling windows that frame truly majestic views of McCall's jaw-dropping landscape.

Architect Stephen Green's keen eye for innovation and sustainability is reflected in Whitetail Club's Highland design – perfectly blending mountain and modern to create a contemporary mountain masterpiece delivered with the highest degree of creativity.

As you approach this gorgeous mountain retreat from its private drive, the sweeping views offered by a contemporary design leave nothing to the imagination. From the main entryway, the floorplan opens up into a spacious, open-concept living, dining, and kitchen area—all of which have enviable panoramic views.

Adjacent to the living area with fireplace sits the main master bedroom, which has a private balcony with a seating area, its own fireplace, and a lovely master bath with soaker tub and dual sinks. Opposite the living and dining areas is a large gourmet kitchen. The lower level of Highlands enjoys a second master bedroom with a private deck and luxurious bathroom that can be used for guests or turned into an additional family bedroom. Two guest suites, both with an en suite bathroom, flank a large game room with a cozy fireplace and room enough for a large media station.

The interior spaces were oriented so that each living space will face Payette Lake or McCall's astounding geography. Ultimately offering unobstructed views that will mesmerize friends and family during social moments from the home's open concept living, dining, and kitchen area.

Buyers at Whitetail Club have the opportunity to customize their homes – including the Highlands – though we would not change a thing about this mountain sanctuary.